Maths Planning Intervention

The aim of the course is to provide training on the best ways to support and to plan interventions for learners with Dyscalculia and Maths Learning Difficulties.

I will detail the lesson template that I use when planning interventions and will give ideas for each section of the lesson. The course will also cover general best practice in terms of adopting the concrete pictorial abstract approach to teaching maths, as well as strategies for developing number sense and visualisation. Resources to support this such as five frames, ten frames, base ten materials, Cuisenaire will be explored and also how to teach typically tricky concepts such as fractions and place value.

Other approaches such as Growth mindset will be visited alongside tips for overcoming maths anxiety.

Introduction to Dyscalculia and Maths Difficulties

This training will look at the reasons why so many children struggle with maths, including dyscalculia and maths anxiety. Indicators of dyscalculia will be detailed together with a review of current screening tools to identify dyscalculia.

We will also explore a range of strategies to support children with dyscalculia including techniques such as visualisation and bar modelling. How to get the most out of concrete manipulatives will also be explored. The training will be very hands on with plenty of practical activities that practitioners will be able to implement straight away in their teaching.

The training will refer to up to date research in this area, from practitioners and researchers including Prof. Steve Chinn, Prof. Brian Butterworth and Prof. Jo Boaler.
